Intelligent Yoga Teacher Training

The IYTT diploma is fully recognised and accredited by the British Wheel of Yoga and Yoga Alliance Professionals.

It has been created to develop knowledgeable, responsive and confident teachers who teach yoga based on a solid understanding of both the fundamental workings of the body and an appreciation of its natural intelligence.

This will be an exciting and inspiring course, which encourages trainees to explore their approach to yoga practice. Throughout the course, we'll refer to the most current anatomical and movement research, and support trainees as they deepen and expand their understanding and perception of yoga.

The course will be led by Catherine Annis and Tanya Love. Anatomy and physiology will be delivered by renowned teachers Peter Blackaby and Gary Carter, providing one of the most comprehensive groundings in anatomy of any teacher training course in the UK.

- Safe practice: identifying postural issues and preventing injury
- Teaching skills: demonstration, sequencing, class organisation and lesson planning
- Essential prāṇāyāma, breath awareness and restorative yoga
- Body-reading and applying respectful adjustments
- How to teach 1:1 private client classes
- Meditation
- The history of yoga and its place in the modern world
- Ethics and responsibilities of yoga teachers
- Business skills and marketing

Faculty

Catherine Annis – senior teacher

Originally a professional dancer, Catherine Annis has been practising yoga since the 1970s. She explored Sivananda, Iyengar, Astanga & various forms of Hatha before gravitating towards the teachings of Vanda Scaravelli. She taught the teacher training course at Triyoga for several years & is regularly invited to teach around the world and as guest teacher on several yoga teacher trainings. She holds an MA in ballet studies & is a qualified Thai massage therapist.

Tanya Love - core teacher

Tanya Love has been practising yoga for more than 20 years & qualified as a teacher in 2011. She studied Living Anatomy with the CranioSacral Therapy Educational Trust, holds an Association of Physical & Natural Therapists qualification in Anatomy & Physiology & is qualified in pregnancy yoga. She is a certified Hakomi therapist & practises this mindfulness-based form of body psychotherapy in London. She believes yoga has the potential to be profoundly therapeutic.

Anatomy & Physiology

We're passionate about creating a course which acknowledges and celebrates the intelligence and adaptability of the human body.

Anatomy will be delivered by renowned teachers Peter Blackaby and Gary Carter. Peter and Gary each bring their outstanding knowledge and experience to the course, and are well known for their ability to make challenging concepts clear and accessible. Their teaching will provide trainees with an unparalleled depth and breadth of anatomical knowledge. This course therefore offers one of the most comprehensive groundings in anatomy of any teacher training course in the UK.

You will learn:

- The basics of anatomy and physiology
- Practical functional anatomy & physiology, including the latest research on fascia
- Body reading and how to identify tension and holding patterns
- The art of re-establishing healthy movement
- Fundamental movement principles and biomechanics
- How the theory of anatomy and physiology applies in the moving body

Anatomy can be challenging. We want to bring it to life, to make it relevant and inspiring, linking an understanding of the physical body directly to the teaching of yoga, so that it becomes a vibrant tool, stimulating a dynamic exploration into the teaching and practice of yoga.

Peter Blackaby – functional anatomy

Peter began yoga in 1978 and qualified as an Iyengar teacher. He is an Osteopath, and taught anatomy and physiology at the Chiron centre for Body Centred Psychotherapy. Over the last 15 years, Peter has focused on the scientific underpinning of the practice of yoga, both in the bio-mechanical sense and in the mind / body relationship. Peter teaches anatomy on various teacher training courses, and is regularly invited to teach throughout the UK and abroad.

Gary Carter – anatomy & myofascial connections

Gary has taught yoga and movement for 25 years. He studied Shiatsu, Chi Ne Tsang, CranioSacral Therapy and the Anatomy Trains theory with Tom Myers, completing the KMI Structural Integration training. He ran the Science of Movement Course at Middlesex University from 2007- 2011 and studied dissection at the Institute of Anatomy in Vienna. He ran Natural Bodies centre in Brighton for over 20 years and continues to lecture on anatomy at yoga and Pilates teacher trainings across the UK.

Jody Barber - introduction to anatomy & physiology

Jody is a Chartered Physiotherapist of 26 years who has been practicing yoga since 1998. She is also a qualified yoga teacher who has an in-depth knowledge of anatomy, biomechanics, motor control, motor learning and neural plasticity. She practises as a physiotherapist and yoga teacher in the NHS and private practice.

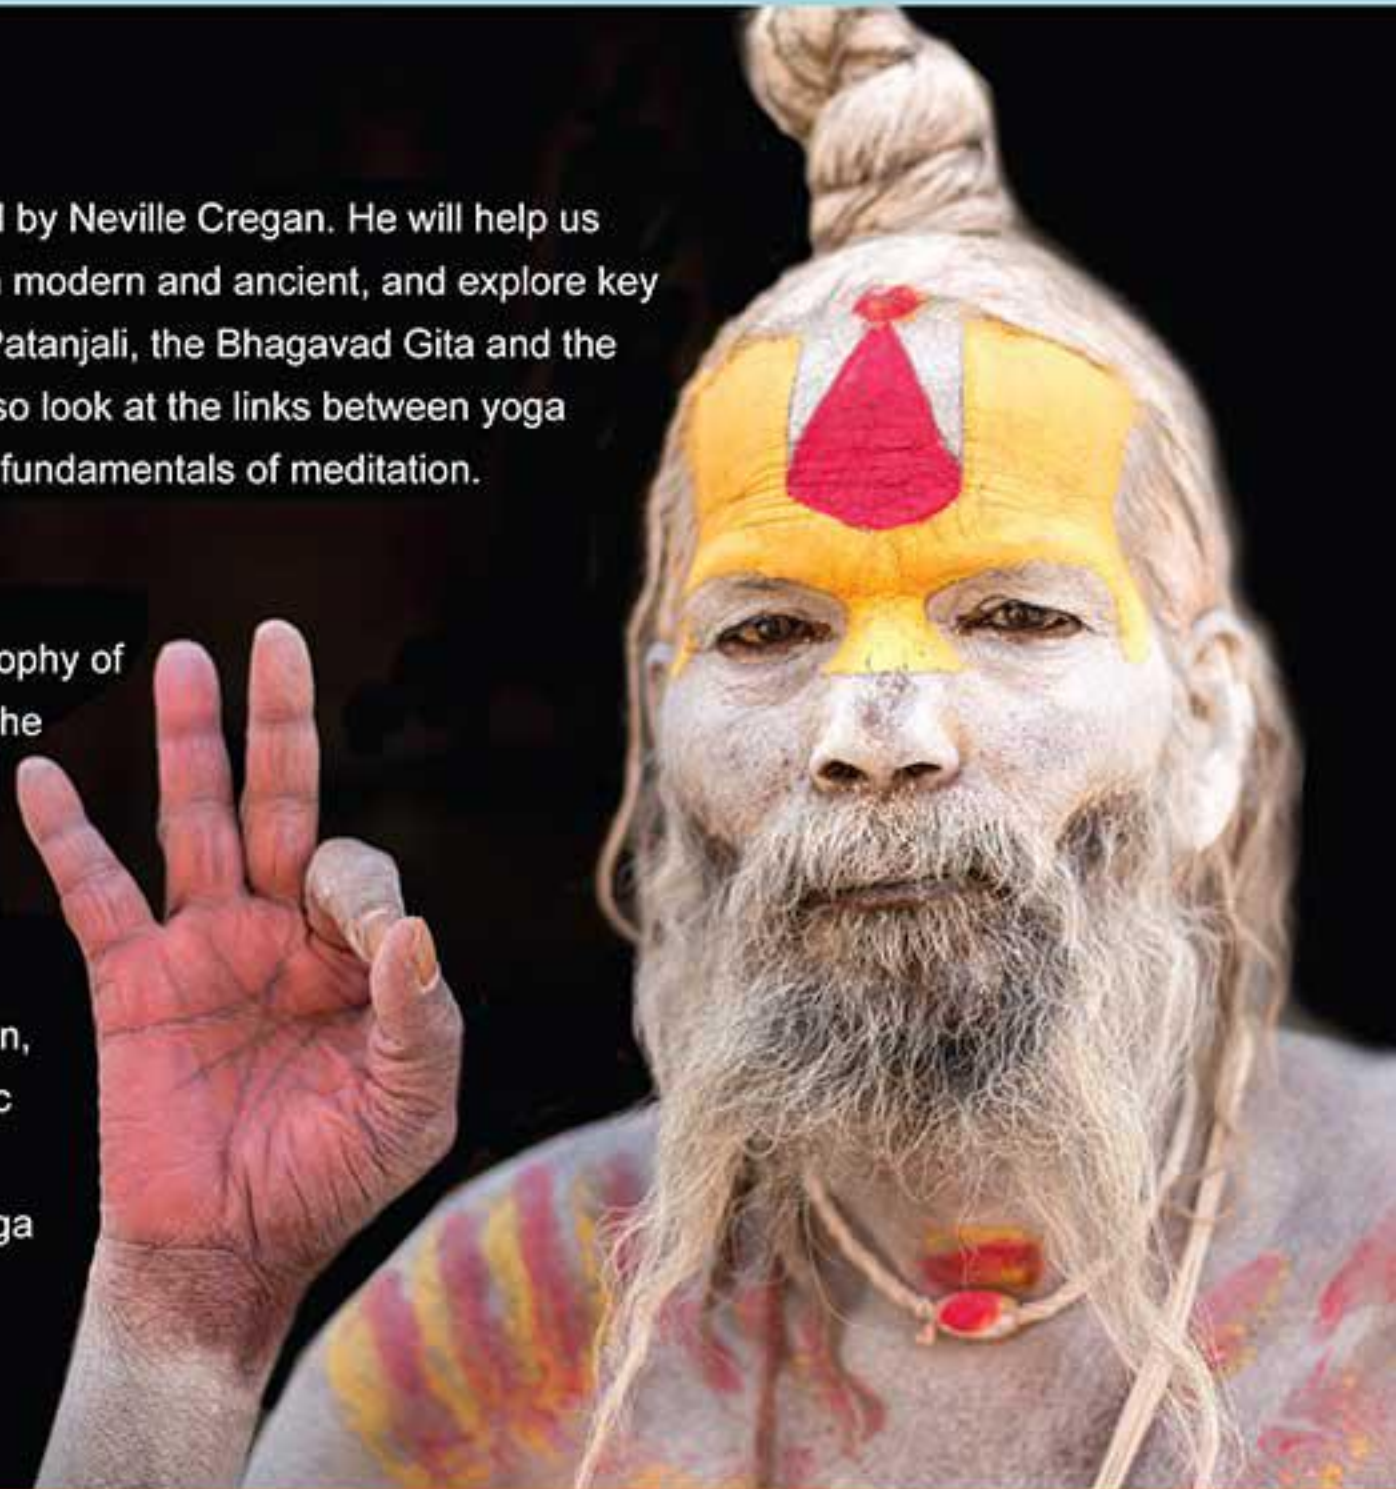

Yoga Philosophy

Yoga Philosophy will be delivered by Neville Cregan. He will help us examine the history of yoga, both modern and ancient, and explore key texts including the Upanishads, Patanjali, the Bhagavad Gita and the Hatha Yoga Pradipika. We will also look at the links between yoga and Buddhism and introduce the fundamentals of meditation.

Neville Cregan

Neville has been teaching the history and philosophy of yoga since 2003. During a trip through India in the 1980s, he accidentally ended up at an ashram, and the experience inspired his curiosity. On his return to the UK, he completed a Humanities BA focusing on Indian religions and philosophy. He is interested in issues of cultural appropriation, and exploring whether modern Western scientific knowledge is changing our approach to yoga. Neville is also an accredited British Wheel of Yoga (BWY) teacher, and a qualified Thai massage therapist and reflexologist.

Accreditation

The IYTT diploma is fully recognised and accredited by The British Wheel of Yoga and by Yoga Alliance Professionals.
